FiX Clarity | Founder Profile

Built to give business owners an honest look under the hood.

Nick Polyzos founded FiX Clarity for a simple reason: he was tired of watching good business owners get burned.

Time and again, he saw hardworking people hand their money to agencies and consultants, receive a slick presentation and a binder full of promises, and walk away with little to show for it. He believed there had to be a better way, one built on honesty instead of hype.

So he built it.

Nick approaches business the same way a good mechanic approaches a car: don't guess, don't upsell, and don't talk down to people. Find what's actually wrong, explain it clearly, and fix it. It is a practical, no-nonsense approach rooted in genuine respect for the people behind the business, the families, dreams, and livelihoods that depend on it.

A natural problem-solver, Nick has a talent for identifying operational friction and uncovering issues others often miss. Give him something that isn't working, and he'll work relentlessly to understand why and find a better path forward, often using what's already there instead of adding unnecessary cost and complexity.

His mission is straightforward: give small business owners a fair shot, an honest look under the hood, and a clear path forward without the jargon, pressure, or runaround. Because the people who build businesses deserve someone in their corner who actually gives a damn.

Outside of work, Nick enjoys spending time with family, taking trips to the mountains or the beach, catching a game, and playing pool whenever he gets the chance.
